

ARTIST: MUDLOW
TITLE: WELCOME TO MUDLOW COUNTRY

Mudlow isn't just a band, it's a place. Characters, stories and landmarks combine to paint a sleazy picture. Expect murder, suicide, gaol breaks and insurance fraud!

Formed from the ashes of Brighton swamp-rock favourites Crawl Limbo, Mudlow proudly present their debut album "Welcome to Mudlow Country" on West Pier Records.

Mudlow is inspired by fucked-up blues, garage, country, klezmer, striptease and more. The sound is dirty as the swamp that spawned it and sexy as hell.

Brighton's Mudlow have become my new Afghan Whigs, my new Nick Cave, my new Mariah: impossible to play loud enough. I want to crawl inside their sound and drink deep 'til hammered and slaked then dance, spin, buck, bark and rail along with it before the next song picks me up on its gangster lean and shoulders me to the next basement bar.

Rick Saunders' World

"Thrusting screaming sax, hollering harmonica, dirty guitars and sleazy howling vocals ... an awesome set of sultry blues rock."

"Had the crowd by the scruff of their necks unable to resist a good swing of the hips. It's the kind of music that makes you want to bark like a dog, and I am certainly one bitch who will definitely be purchasing their album post haste."

Erin Prior, BBC Southern Counties Radio

Mudlow have one eye firmly on the US, but their seedy, growling version of the music of The Deep South, has the salt of the Channel in its lungs and the darkness of [Graham] Greene's bad boy, Pinky, lurking in the nooks and crannies of excellent debut album, Welcome To Mudlow Country. The obvious reference point is Tom Waits, though there are moments which remind of Springsteen's better work. And the lecherous saxes of the humungous brass section give an interesting and original air to this fine collection.

Joe Cushley, Blues Matters

My favourite band with two saxophones since Morphine. But, seriously, they kick bottom.

NME's James Snodgrass

I don't write the rules - I just keep the book by the side of my bed.

Pauly Trimble, Saxophonist

For more information please contact Mike Powell: info@boxedbrand.com or 07977 101835